TOWARD HEALTHY RELATIONSHIPS

From the beginning of creation, God intended for people to live together in relationships with one another. Much of scripture shows us how to do this as it illustrates and clarifies God's plans. The readings this weekend guide us in the value and care of our relationships. Specifically, the Gospel focuses on the circumstances of failed relationships. Unlike the Pharisees, we would do well not to focus on the laws that pertain to failed relationships, but concentrate instead on what God really intended for us. Healthy bonds require a lot of our time and energy. They certainly require trust and honesty. Jesus demonstrated a deep commitment to his friends and to us. As our brother, he gave his very life for us. Children work hard at friendships. They trust, forgive, and love without conditions. The final words of today's Gospel invite us to welcome Jesus and the people of our relationships with the fresh enthusiasm of a child.

WHAT'S HAPPENING AROUND THE ARCHDIOCESE

ESTABLISHING HEALTHY BOUNDARIES: A PERSONAL BODY SAFETY PROGRAM

Establishing Healthy Boundaries: A Personal Body Safety Program is part of the Archdiocese of Los Angeles' commitment to protecting children and youth -- in this case, young teens in the sixth seventh and eighth grades.

It was created by Pam Church, author of the Good Touch/Bad Touch® program currently used in Kindergarten through fifth grade classrooms. Church says taking the program to the junior high-level was in response to numerous requests she received from educators across the country.

"Junior high teachers expressed their need for a program that would give young teens a safe environment in which to discuss the changes taking place in their lives," Church explains. "Teachers wanted a program for these young people who are dealing with so many issues such as changing peer relationships, dating, sexual harassment, bullying and understanding appropriate boundaries. Establishing Healthy Boundaries is my response to these requests."

Church identifies the major strengths of Establishing Healthy Boundaries as giving young teens the vocabulary, the strategies and the skills to:

- ♦ discuss violence as it relates to teen relationships.
- ♦ evaluate whether something is or is not abusive.
- ♦ deal with angry feelings without harming others or themselves.
- ♦ discuss the concept of respect, power and boundaries.
- ♦ identify common behaviors of sexual offenders.
- ♦ identify bystander strategies for helping.
- ♦ know personal Body Safety Rules to use in their own lives.

Young people, says Church, need the opportunity to talk about these issues. "With the research we have on violence prevention and sexual abuse, it is imperative that this information be shared with our youth," she says.

Loretta Haemker, school nurse at Our Lady of Grace School in Encino, sees Establishing Healthy Boundaries as essential training for today's teens. As a mother of two teenage sons, a nurse for 27 years and a trained Establishing Healthy Boundaries facilitator, Haemker knows that as children get older the problems of sexual abuse become more complicated.

She also observes how young people today feel heavily pressured by media images and messages that show teens having relationships but never point out the consequences.

Establishing Healthy Boundaries say Haemker, teaches students appropriate boundaries for themselves and others. "We cannot assume because these young people are in junior high they are now safe from predators," she says. "Training in boundaries and respect can alert them to potential problems.

Sexual abuse does not discriminate, continues Haemker. "Very young children or youth, male or female, rich or poor--all children and youth are at risk. As parents, we cannot know every person our child is going to encounter. Students in their beginning teen years are not always clear about what is OK and what is not OK in relationships.

"Establishing Healthy Boundaries provides students with the opportunity to explore real life situations. It opens the door to discussion. It is no longer acceptable to keep our youth silent and ashamed."

Friends and parents sometimes question her, Haemker says, as to why schools are teaching Establishing Healthy Boundaries. Her response is clear and to the point: "If it wasn't a societal problem, schools would not have to be involved! I am so grateful to be a part of this program. It will make all the differences in the lives of young people."

Joan Vienna, coordinator of the Archdiocesan Office of Safeguard the Children, reiterates the importance of boundary training for our youth. "We owe our young people information and life skills to deal with sexual abuse and boundary violations," she explains. "Junior high students are dealing with potential abusive behaviors, not just from individuals, but from the media, cell phones and computers. We must openly talk about these issues with them."

Pam Church -- who created the Good Touch/Bad Touch® program in 1983 when she learned she had children who had suffered sexual abuse -- believes that her program "gives young teens the tools to recognize inappropriate advances and the skills and strategies to deal with these situations.

"Establishing Healthy Boundaries is about reinforcing that God has made each one of us special and that each person has the right to be recognized and treated as special."

OCTOBER 15

RESPECT LIFE MONTH

“The common outcry, which is justly made on behalf of human rights - for example, the right to health, to home, to work, to family, to culture - is false and illusory if the right to life, the most basic and fundamental right and the condition for all other personal rights, is not defended with maximum determination. ... The human being is entitled to such rights, in every phase of development -- from conception until natural death; and in every condition, whether healthy or sick, whole or handicapped, rich or poor.”

Pope John Paul II, Apostolic Exhortation
Christifideles Laice, no. 38 (1988)

Thus, a human life is precious when someone thinks it is, be it a parent or be it a civil court, and when that life is deemed not to be human or otherwise to be without value, then it is expendable. This kind of gross inconsistency is not questioned in our society, but is taken for granted with serenity, sad to say.

Bishop Robert C. Morlino, National Catholic Prayer Breakfast,
April 7, 2006.
