ARCHDIOCESE LAUNCHES
‘TOUCHING SAFETY’ TO EMPOWER CHILDREN

Nearly 2,000 religious education catechists were recently trained in Touching Safety, an educational program to empower young people to recognize safe and unsafe touches and to seek help when they are in a vulnerable situation that could lead to abuse.

Touching Safety has been developed by VIRTUS®, which also developed the program used in the Archdiocese of Los Angeles to train adults to recognize the characteristics and behavior patterns of potential child molesters. More than 40,000 adults working with or around minors in parishes and schools have been trained in child abuse prevention in the past four years.

The next phase is to empower children K-12 to recognize the warning signs that they may be in danger, to speak out on their own behalf, and to find the help necessary to prevent abuse from happening.

The program Good Touch/Bad Touch® already is being used in 100 Catholic schools. Touching Safety has been selected as an affordable, easy-to-teach program that will be implemented in parish religious education programs. It is fully bilingual, offers many materials online, and provides continuity between the VIRTUS® program for adults and the VIRTUS® program for youth.

Touching Safety is not a sex education program. It is a personal safety education program. Speaking to parents and catechists, Sister of Charity Mary Elizabeth Gal, chancellor, recently said: “You taught your children how to cross the street -- ‘Look both ways. Don’t stand too close to the curb. Don’t run across the street.’ That’s a safety. You taught them not to touch something hot. You taught them all these rules to protect themselves. Touching Safety is just another aspect of protecting our children.”

Touching Safety is based on research into how the abuse of minors is able to take place. In the landmark book “Child Sexual Abuse,” author David Finkelhor, the foremost authority on preventing child sexual abuse in this country, describes four elements necessary for child abuse to occur:

1. An adult has a propensity, desire and willingness to enter into sexual activity with children.
2. The adult doesn’t do anything to stop themselves and to inhibit their own behaviors.
3. A secluded and private opportunity presents itself in which the offense can occur.
4. The offending adult is able to overcome any resistance the child has to his or her overtures.

The point of Touching Safety is to empower children to resist those overtures.
